

Our Approach

Full access to our trainers if you want to talk tech

Employers can speak directly with our trainers as needed, helping them to make the right choices for their technical departments.

No salespeople

We don't employ salespeople. Instead, our team members, typically former teachers passionate about impacting education differently, provide information, advice and guidance. They share the essential facts about apprenticeships, enabling well-informed decisions.

Employer-designed delivery model

Based on employer feedback, the preferred delivery model consists of one fixed weekly lesson (2 hours), with the remaining learning agreed between the employer and the apprentice around workload responsibilities.

Science-backed training

Scientific research supports that short, weekly lessons integrating the 'learn then practice' cycle is the most successful method for apprentices to learn. This is more effective than the block or day release approach.

Digital Apprenticeship Pathways

Every programme we offer includes AI skills as part of the learning journey, whether through the programme itself or with the addition of BCS or Cisco accredited AI & Data qualifications.

We're committed to maximising the impact of our apprenticeships and include these at no extra cost to employers or apprentices – giving apprentices industry-recognised qualifications that enrich learning, build confidence and deliver even greater value to organisations. See our website for more details.
